

CICASP Seminar in Science Communication: Outline

Wednesday 20th February, 2019

Outline: CICASP Seminar #99

Presentation Practice IV and Creating Academic Profile

The PWS symposium is coming up soon, and many students will be presenting their study progress or proposals for entrance in the graduate program. The CICASP will give an opportunity for these students to practice their presentation and increases their chances of success in the next two seminars (Feb 20 and 27).

Each student will have approximately 25 minutes, including time for Q&A from the audience and feedback to improve their presentation in relation to contents, delivery, and data visualization.

In the first seminar (Feb 20), Fabrizio Serrao will be presenting a poster. Everybody is welcome to attend and give him feedback. All students can benefit from the workshop by learning about his study and by getting tips about how to improve presentations.

There is still one slot available for presentation. If you wish to practice your presentation, please contact me at <rafaela.takeshita.3n@kyoto-u.ac.jp>

In sequence, we will help students to finalize their academic profiles. Students who wish to receive feedback on their web profiles, please bring your drafts from previous workshops.

We at CICASP have found that students who perform practice presentations leading up to a conference were able to significantly improve their presentations by taking into account the comments and advice received during these practice sessions. Many of them have received presentation awards.
